INTERNSHIPS

For young people, training under direct supervision in a professional environment can be as important as receiving a college degree. An internship is a key career experience that all high school and college students "must have" before entering the workforce. Yet, "less than 10% of college grads do a college internship," according to the National Association of Colleges and Employers (NACE). BIZNOVATOR recognizes that while college degrees are critically important, Internships make the real difference in young people as they prepare to seek out and secure jobs in a competitive marketplace.
